We publish on another page a very considerable part of President Cleveland's message to Congress. It treats of our relation with foreign countries and of our financial situation. It is intended that any thinking man can appreciate all of it and study it with profit. The President takes these two as his subject's because they are of vast consequence and are uppermost in the minds of the American people to day, especially that relating to the country's financial condition.

The President shows plainly that one of the most potent causes of our present difficulty is in our "greenbacks." This government paper redeemable in gold, as has been explained in the Compiler, places the government in the position of a banker. For its redemption a reserve in gold must be kept in the treasury. These "greenbacks" are presented and paid drawing when they are reissued. They may be and are again used to draw the treasury of its gold. These continual drafts, permitted by the laws to deplete a treasury, have been a perpetual menace and have necessitated the issue of bonds to sustain the gold reserve. President Cleveland, therefore, urges the retirement of these "greenbacks" and suggests in their stead a currency issued by the bank.

As a means of accomplishing this result he recommends the exchange of these for similar notes bonds of small, as well as large denominations, bearing a low rate of interest. To meet the possible objection that a reduction of the treasury notes will operate a contraction of the currency, the messenger recommends a reduction of the tax on the circulation of the national bank notes and a removal of the present restriction on their circulation so as to allow them to issue notes equal to the par of the bonds they deposit to secure it.

The free silver people and those having a tendency in that direction, have, of course, taken exception to the views expressed in the message. This is to be expected, as the President is a thorough going sound money man who turns neither to the left nor to the right after votes. In this he differs much from the Republicans who have already introduced a bill into the Senate looking to the control of the "silver" vote. All men of sound ideas of finance will commend President Cleveland on the firm stand he has taken and will read his message with satisfaction.

In our relation with foreign countries the President is a proper conservative. It is well that he differs from the袒派 elements who desire him to rush into war headlong with or without reason. Whatever differences we have had with other peoples' have been or may be settled amicably. At least such a setlement is to be sought after and this is the course which the President suggests. He is entirely right. He seems to have anticipated all the criticisms and complaints which the jingos are likely to make in regard to the foreign policy of the administration, and disposed of them in a simple, clear and candid statement of the facts. No fan or unprejudiced person—Democrat or Republican—can take this portion of the message without being impressed by the perfect fairness and firmness with which the President has upheld all the rights of the country and the traditional and accepted doctrines of American diplomacy.

Whatever his politics, every citizen ought to read a important public documents for his own education. These public questions the quicker these questions will be settled and the better President Cleveland is a strong and well informed man. He views all the subjects of his party with a clear and unbiased eye. The Republicans are going entirely too fast down in Maryland. They no sooner think they have the plumb than they begin to fight over it.

All the leading Republicans of the country on the Eastern Shore of the bay, together with Republican members of the Legislature from that section, were in Baltimore last Wednesday discussing the contemplated move of Republicans of the Western counties to elect Congressman George J. Walling to the United States Senatehip to succeed Gibson. The Eastern Shore men were in opposition to the repeal or ignoring of the Eastern Shore law or "tradition" that one of Maryland's Senators must come from the eastern side of the Chesapeake Bay. It was decided that the Eastern Shore members of the Legislature would insist upon the election of one of their several candidates for the Senatorship.

It is my birthright," emphatically declared Colonel Mulliken, of Talbot, and if they repeat the law they will break the Republican party on the Eastern Shore and it would be useless to name a Republican ticket in any county on the Shore for the next ten years should Wellington or any other Western Shoreman succeed Mr. Gibson.

THE COUNCIL'S DUTY

The Electric Railway came to Gettysburg a couple of years ago, with the apparent intention of running through and succeeded, doubtless beyond their own expectation. The town council granted to the company the right of way over our streets for the mere consideration of keeping parts of the streets in repair—between the track and two feet on each side. From the time the tracks were laid to the present no attention has been paid to this section, the contractor excepting in a very few unimportant places. A valuable franchise which should properly have brought revenue into the Borough treasury has been a source of expense and annoyance to the council as to the people. It was given free of charge, simply because certain members of the council were favorable to Mr. Hooper, and the town's suffering the consequence.

These tracks have gotten so much out of repair that they were returned by all the constables of the town at the last session of Court. The matter was brought to the attention of the council and proceedings were about to be instituted to compel the specific performance of the contract. The electric railway people were notified and for the one month and one time, promises were made. But it was not at last the council refused to give the three times to proceed.

The most important circumstance connected with the unfortunate condition in which the council now finds itself is the character of the township management. Its promises are not to be depended upon as has been clearly demonstrated. This being the case, the council's attention to the rights of the people, abandoning a consideration in which it was heretofore had for Mr. Hooper. The council cannot release itself of responsibility by refusing to be on the streets until the electric people do something. It had the power to grant the right of way, but could not, and did not, refuse its use to the people toward the public. We take it then that the suggestion made at the last council to let the repair of the streets go by default awaiting the action of Mr. Hooper is an untenable position and is not fair to the public. For the condition of the streets the council is responsible. We do not think that it can place this duty elsewhere, under any consideration. It must see to it that these tracks are kept in proper condition and it may recover the cost, if it can by proceeding on the bond given by Mr. Hooper to fulfill his contract. But this bond, being valueless, at least so thought, the town suffers the loss unless something else can be done to force the electric company.

This something, suggested at the last council meeting, is to begin proceedings to compel the removal of the cars the year around, under the law. It is an indirect way of getting at the point—the street repairs, but may have the effect of demonstrating to the railway management that the council will hereafter give proper consideration to the right of the citizens.

The Borough treasury is not strong enough, just at present, to back up any expensive legal proceedings, but the gentlemen of the council are justified in compelling the performance of a contract which affects the people, if it may be said at a reasonable cost. The liberty of suggesting that the best legal authority be gotten on the subject before proceedings are instituted.

THE MANNER OF REPUBLICAN MANAGEMENT.

The reckless extravagance of Pennsylvania's last Legislature is shown by the figures in the report made by the State Treasurer last week. They show not only a decreased revenue but, also, an enormous increase of expenditures.

The revenue of the State for the year ended Dec. 1, aggregated $11,372,024.76 while the payments amounted to $13,192,045. As there was a balance in the general fund of the Treasury on November 30, 1894, of $5,014,942.16 that on November 30, 1895, was $2,950,018.55.

While the receipts at the Treasury have shown a downward tendency the past two years the expenditures have increased from $12,975,625 in 1893, to $13,302,045 in 1895. In both of these years the Legislature was in session, which fact furnishes a fair basis for comparison. The increased disbursements were mainly due to the large appropriations by the Legislature, the increase of the salaries of officials, the creation of the expensive Department of Agriculture and the reorganization of the Banking department on a very extravagant scale. The expenses of the Factory Bureau have also been greatly augmented.

COFFINS.

In the matter of the suit of Donald P. McPherson against the board of Education for final examination for admission to the Bar, the Court held that John M. Manner, the executor of the will of John M. Manner, was directed to keep alive a judgment pronounced by himself in favor of the plaintiff, and to ascertain and to whom it was due, and to pay to the plaintiff the amount of the judgment.

Mrs. Josephine Cole has returned from a length visit to Columbus and York.

Mr. Edward Slomicki of Minneapolis, general in the suit of the late Lew Lehr, executor of the will of John M. Manner, the executor was directed to keep alive a judgment pronounced by himself in favor of the plaintiff, and to ascertain and to whom it was due, and to pay to the plaintiff the amount of the judgment.

Mr. John Mickley of Cashiers, spent several days at Mr. John F. Cole's the past week in the annual hunt during the hunting season.

Miss Ellen Kruse is visiting her cousin Miss Katie Irvin in Gettysburg and will be here a week. Her husband and son have a large band of hunting men and had not time to re-load his gun he was obliged to climb a tree for protection from the intruding animals.

The boy stood at the door for quite a long time when it walked past and laid down. Mr. Jerry descended re-loaded his gun and shot him where he lay. For a moment he lay still, then got up and went into his pocket and shot ten times from the two, having shot out an eye of the deer. This was the third deer of the season for Mr. Jerry.

Miss Ellen Kruse is visiting her cousin Miss Katie Irvin in Gettysburg and will be here a week. Her husband and son have a large band of hunting men and had not time to re-load his gun he was obliged to climb a tree for protection from the intruding animals.

The boy stood at the door for quite a long time when it walked past and laid down. Mr. Jerry descended re-loaded his gun and shot him where he lay. For a moment he lay still, then got up and went into his pocket and shot ten times from the two, having shot out an eye of the deer. This was the third deer of the season for Mr. Jerry.

Mr. Josephine Cole has returned from a length visit to Columbus and York.

Mr. Edward Slomicki of Minneapolis, general in the suit of the late Lew Lehr, executor of the will of John M. Manner, the executor was directed to keep alive a judgment pronounced by himself in favor of the plaintiff, and to ascertain and to whom it was due, and to pay to the plaintiff the amount of the judgment.

Mr. John Mickley of Cashiers, spent several days at Mr. John F. Cole's the past week in the annual hunt during the hunting season.
